

The New Economy: Preparing Utah for the Future

Utah Intergovernmental Roundtable Annual Summit

November 4, 2009

Salt Lake City Radisson, 215 West South Temple
Salt Lake City, Utah

The current economic conditions are impacting all of us and our organizations. It is easy to get caught up in how our 401(k)s are doing today or how a program will be funded next year but the impacts of the changes will be felt in our communities for many years. The result is a new economy and Utah must prepare for the new challenges.

The Utah Intergovernmental Roundtable Annual Summit will explore how the current economic crisis will impact our communities on a long term basis. National and local experts will discuss how the new economy will influence decisions on housing, community planning, and transportation. In addition, growth patterns and changing demographics will be addressed.

Confirmed speakers include:

- David Wyss, Chief Economist, Standard & Poor's
- Jeff Thredgold, Chief Economist of Zions Bank and President of Thredgold Economic Associates
- Arthur C. Nelson, Presidential Professor, College of Architecture + Planning, The University of Utah
- Pamela Perlich, Senior Research Economist, Bureau of Economic & Business Research, The University of Utah
- Kristen Cox, Executive Director, Utah Department of Workforce Services
- Alan Matheson, Executive Director, Envision Utah
- Ralph Becker, Mayor of Salt Lake City
- Chuck Chappell, Executive Director, Wasatch Front Regional Council

The event will be held November 4th, at the Salt Lake City Radisson, 215 West South Temple beginning at 8:00 a.m. It includes a continental breakfast and lunch. Registration cost $60.
